Filantia IPO is an interactive case study where students take the role of an executive facing a business-related ethical dilemma.

This interactive case study:

- Introduces the subject of ethics to the class
- Makes students consider the issue of insider information and the decisions they would make
After making a decision about what to do with the privileged information, students must justify their position. These analysis are later used to strengthen class discussion.

Related documentation (in a printable format) is included and can be used as a complement to this interactive case study.
Professors have their own page where they can see the results of their classes and the particular comments of each of their students. This can be used by the professor in the preparation of the class.

A statistical analysis is provided. Through this tool the professor can see the breakdown of the decisions.
