New economic prediction indicators is an interactive technical note which identifies the main indicators of economic forecasting, which can be used to stay one step ahead of the analysts, with regard to predicting the performance of economic aggregates and their effects on markets.

This interactive technical note looks at the following topics:

- The economy and macroeconomics
- Forecasting
- Indicators
This technical note deals with concepts such as: economic cycle, basic economic aggregates, the Taylor rule, Conference Board indicators, ISM, Big Mac and other indicators. It also includes links to data sources.
Graphs and tables facilitate the economic interpretation of the indicators and the study of cycles in major markets and enable students to test the validity of the prediction instruments.